Academic recognition

All qualifications gained abroad have to be academically recognised. Academic recognition refers to determining the academic value of a qualification, for example, it determines whether the foreign qualification, in principle, meets general academic requirements for a similar qualification in Lithuania. It is carried out in accordance with the Lisbon Recognition Convention and its subsidiary documents. The principles of the Convention have been transferred into our national legislation.

After the evaluation the qualification might be:

- recognised;
- not recognised;
- recognised by granting only certain rights (for example, to enter only a study programme in a certain field, etc.);
- recognised with additional requirements/conditions, for example, take additional exams/preparation course, have the right to apply only for specific study programmes, etc.

Recognition in admission procedure

Recognition and selection are two different but related steps in the admission procedure when handling applications of candidates with foreign academic backgrounds. While recognition focuses on determining whether the applicant's qualifications are sufficient for entry into the programme, selection focuses on other – additional – requirements posed to prospective students (for example, grades, language level etc.).

During the process of admission, the eligibility of a candidate for access to specific programmes based on his or her academic credentials is determined. The admissions procedure encompasses the following:

- General access – whether the applicant has the necessary academic credentials for access to the programmes at a certain level (for example, a qualification which would allow access to the bachelor's programmes);
- Access to specific programmes – whether the applicant meets specific admission requirements, such as a certain qualification profile, competency in certain subjects or subject clusters (for example, a degree which would allow access to the master's programme in Law).

Roles of different institutions

KSU makes decisions on both – recognition and admission. The Centre for Quality Assessment in Higher Education supervises KSU only in the area of academic recognition.

Right to appeal recognition decisions

Academic recognition decisions regarding foreign qualifications and issued by KSU can be appealed against to the Academic Recognition of Foreign Qualifications Concerning Higher Education Appeal Committee under the Centre for Quality Assessment in Higher Education. A signed appeal should be filed within 14 days from the receipt of the decision from KSU. The appeal should be addressed to the Committee and include personal data (name and surname of person who presents appeal, living address, contact e-mail and phone), a valid form of identification, an explanation as to why the decision is contested and all the supporting documentation.

However, if the qualification was recognised, but the applicant was not admitted to KSU, this is not the competence area of the Centre for Quality Assessment in Higher Education.
